Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Saturday 11 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Unsettled, milder. Occasional rain for many, strong winds for some.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain and brisk winds sinking south, before stalling close to Wales and central England. Clearer weather following to the north, with patchy frost, but northwest Scotland sees blustery showers, perhaps heavy. Southern areas mostly mild but drizzly.

Sunday:
Patchy rain moving across central and then northern areas. Further south, drier, perhaps occasionally bright, very mild. Turning windy in west, severe gales in far northwest Scotland by late evening.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Generally unsettled. Showers in the northwest on Monday, with more persistent, heavy rain arriving Tuesday. Elsewhere, cloudy with rain at times. Breezy, mainly in the north, but generally mild throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.